

If injection exists either on API or IMPL side, but not on the other, clients cannot distinguish the way instances should be created.

How does a test use MockLogger where using real one is not relevant?